

Wandering through life as the world is running by
Give me direction, so many questions in my mind
Why do we do these things why do we turn our eyes
So many people living like they're better off blind
What they can't comprehend what they don't even bother to find
So many people living like they're better off blind

Don't let me fall, don't let me fall again
Back where I was, before you came along
And if I fall, and then I call again
I know that you'll be there to right the wrongs

Another day another week another year goes by so many people cry
Everybody wishing for a moment, their tears would dry
Caught on the sideline standing and you're watching the game
The last one left no one is calling your name
And everything is the same
The last one left no one is calling your name

Don't let me fall
Don't let me fall again
Don't let me fall, and if I fall again
I know that you'll be there to right the wrongs
I know that you'll be there to wring the wrongs
