

to us
who were
of necessary birth
for the earths hard
and thankless toil
silence has no meaning

there is never a feeling of tranquility
or mere quietness
never a moment
of soundless calm
from within or without our troubled selves

how can the clamor
of sounds be stilled?
there is no void where noises can collect
and be made mute
[]

how indeed
can there be silence

when our hearts beat out a sonorous beat
meeting the beating drums
of an african past
when our eyes shed
solid tears of iron blood that falls on concrete ground inside our ears

are the many wailing cries of misery
inside our bodies
the internal bleeding
of [] volcanos
inside our heads
the wrapped in thoughts of rebellion

how can there be calm when the storm is yet to come?

this unending silence
taut, impervious, unbending not lending an ear
to the most delicate of sounds awaits the blast of bombs which man will explode
to break this silent bond to []
to the use to create hills of soft obedience where sweet-clothed sounds can rebound
and their echoes glide
like a carefree bird
in rhythmic calm
to a mellow
pure, silent space