Title: You've changed

download from: <http://www.lyricsdisc.com>

Do you remember long ago when we had no will to know about the evils of the world and ignorance was bliss did we forget about those years, have we given into fear, oh I wish I wasn't here

cause everything has changed now Life was so simple it's insane now,
I wish I could step off the train now,
My memories begin to fade out, but I won't let them go

Take me home I never wanted to get old like this Take me back unto my younger days of innocence.

And the war that rages on wouldn't callous us at all we weren't frightened by the threat of nuclear attack and we didn't have to care about government affairs and I wish I still was there

cause everything has changed now
Life was so simple it's insane now, I wish I could step off the train now,
My memories begin to fade out, but I won't let them go

Take me home I never wanted to get old like this,
Take me back unto my younger days of innocence.

Tonight I became what I hate
I lost my youth and I don't like things this way On the edge everyone feels the same things were better in our more innocent days and I wish they'd stayed the same. [2x]

Take me home I never wanted to get old like this Take me back unto my younger days of innocence. [2x]
